The corridors of the Windham High school, in which recitations have registry been held since the opening of the fall term, woing to inadequate folicities to accommodate the increased attendance, were so cold Monday that all classes that met in them had to be dismissed. A large number of the pupils were shivering, and the temperature was pretty low for this season of the year, while means for necessary ventilation are wholly lacking. It will be impossible to continue classes in the corrilors under the present conditions, if the cold camp continues, and it is not thought that it will be much warmer. It is rumored that apparatus may be installed at once for sultably heating and ventilating the corridors, so that classes may be held and no appreciable loss of studies will result.
